Janette,

I apologize for allowing my words which came from an angry place, to make you feel threatened. I could never be threatened by another's words and never thought you could honestly believe that I would act on such words nor did I think these words could result in such a chasm. In fact, I would have thought families would have the strength to overcome. The resulting fracture in our family goes beyond you and I and for that I am truly sorry. It is tragic that circumstances have led to this.

Best Regards,

Janet Powell-Burns
